CITY TRUSTEES

Water Question Holds the Boards. Bond Election to be Called. Ordinances Started

All members present. A communication was received from the city of Tropico asking that Glendale cooperate in maintaining the purity of the water in the Ninth street reservoir.

Bids for supplies for the lighting department were opened and read.

An ordinance relating to fire hydrants and requiring water companies to make connections therewith, was read first and second times and laid over. An ordinance calling an election to select fifteen freeholders to frame a charter for the city, was read first and second times.

An oral report was made by the secretary of the water commission to the effect that the commission recommended that the trustees call an election for the purpose of securing a municipal water plant. Shortly after receiving this report the board went into executive session to discuss the report, the garbage proposition and other matters. After being out about an hour the session was resumed. The committee of the whole then made a report recommending that the trustees call a bond election to the amount of $315,000, divided as follows:

Acquiring municipal water system, $225,000.

Purchase of two parks, $65,000.

Fire apparatus, land and buildings, $20,000.

Street machinery, $5000.

The report of the committee was adopted and the city attorney instructed to prepare the necessary call for the election.

A communication was received from the secretary of state acknowledging receipt of the census report.

The city engineer was instructed to make out requisition for maintenance and repair of streets for fiscal year.

Manager of light department reported progress on ornamental street lighting system and that Broadway will soon be restored to normal condition. The chairman appointed Messrs. Lane and Tower a committee to meet similar committee at Redondo to confer as to railroad accommodations.

POLITICS—GLENDALE QUITE IN IT.

Mr. E. D. Goode will be a candidate at the primary for the Democratic nomination for supervisor. Mr. Goode has the necessary qualifications for the place, having been for many years road master of the district and an old resident in the community. He is handicapped however by being a Democrat in a Republican district.

Mr. C. E. Patterson, former member of the board of supervisors, is in the field for the Republican nomination. He has many friends throughout the county. Supevisor Pridham will be a candidate to succeed himself.

Assemblyman C. H. Randall of Highland Park, finally concluded to drop the assembly contest and enter into the congressional mix-up with Charley Bell of Pasadena, Windham of Long Beach and James McLachlan. Mr. Randall has a good record and is "bad medicine" for the Lissner machine. His independence has won him many friends in the district.

Mr. McLachlan will stand as a straight Republican without any prefix and by reason of his experience in the position for several years, will no doubt make a strong run, but a four-cornered fight is anybody's.

In the Sixty-first Assembly district of which this section is a part, there are also four candidates, Roberts, the Lissner candidate; Ready of La Canada; Lampert and Sherer of Glendale. With two local candidates in the field Glendale should get some advertising anyhow.

In addition to these, Glendale has a candidate for Superior Judge, Mr. E. L. Payne.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

The undersigned announces to the people of the Sixty-first Assembly District that he will be a candidate at the primary election of Sept. 3rd, for the Republican nomination for the assembly. This district comprises fifteen precincts in the city of Los Angeles, extending to the South Pasadena boundary, and incluging Eagle Rock, La Canada, Sunland, Tropico, Glendale, Burbank, Van Nuys, Lankershim and all the northern portion of the county. A residence of over thirty years in this county and constant participation in a small way in its upbuilding, some knowledge of political affairs, and the county's needs, and a freedom from "entangling alliances," are among the qualifications justifying this announcement.

J. C. SHERER.

Glendale, Cal., July 25th.

A dramatic recital that will undoubtedly prove a very enjoyable event will be given by the pupils of Mrs. Cora Belle Howes, next Tuesday evening in the First Presbyterian church. The program will consist largely of favorite short poems of James Whitcomb Riley in several impersonations. Miss Mae Moyer of Los Angeles, soprano, will assist with vocal numbers. Mrs. Howe's pupils are well-known young ladies of Glendale and are earnest students of the art of expression as taught by her.

A large number of invitations have been issued and the recital will no doubt prove an artistic and social event.

THE WATER QUESTION

Water Commission Makes Report. Trustees Will Call a Bond Election—Service Normal.

The water commission turned out in full force Thursday evening of last week at the city hall in response to a call by Chairman Watson. Of the twenty-two members of the commission, about eighteen were present. The developments since the last meeting had evidently had effect upon the commissioners, the artificial shortage brought about by the consolidated company, evidently having brought the members to that frame of mind which usually produces results. A discussion ensued upon various phases of the question on the motion of E. D. Goode to advise the trustees to call a bond election for the purpose of securing a municipal water system. It developed finally that there was not much real difference of opinion among the members of the committee except as to details. Messrs. Lane, Muhleman, Flower and Sherer voted against the resolution, apparently on the ground that the matter of expenditure seemed to be left altogether in the hands of the trustees to manage as they saw fit, either by buying Owens river water or the local systems, or both, as far as their limit would allow. The resolution passed and the meeting adjourned. At Monday evening's meeting of the trustees the matter was taken up and threshed out in executive session, resulting in a determination to call a bond election asking for $225,000 for water purposes with additional sums for parks, fire department, street machinery, etc. When the call is made, as it will be next week, it will be in such terms as will enable the voters to vote affirmatively or adversely on any one or all of the propositions. It seems to be the intention of the trustees to secure any of the local companies or systems that can be had on advantageous terms and at a fair price. The companies which are prepared to do business with the city at present time, are the Miradero and the Consolidated. The former's patrons are about one-half outside of the city limits in the Casa Verdugo section. This company has about ten inches of water in Verdugo Canon. A price of $28,500 has been put upon this property, which is considered fair. The Consolidated wants $66,000 for its distributing system and from 15 to 17 inches of water. No other offiers have been made to the city. The Verdugo Springs Company has set no price upon its 666 shares of Verdugo Canon water (about 9 to 10 inches), and its 20-inch well, reservoir and pumping plant. Probably the valuation would be nearly the same as that of the Miradero company. On the East Side, the Verdugo Pipe and Reservoir Co. represents about 17 inches of water belonging to its individual stockholders, the estimated value of this property may be placed at $40,000. A well in connection with this plant yields 12 inches of water and is good for more. A well belonging to the Consolidated company on West Fourth street which has not recently been pumped is said to be good for 100 inches; whether this is included in the company's offer is uncertain. These four companies represent about all of the local water that appears to be available as at present developed, but with an improvement in the distributing system, the acquiring of these wells would undoubtedly settle the water question for a considerable time as there would be carried with the acquisition, the right of development by wells, a right which has not been extensively exercised, but enough has been done to indicate great possibilities in that direction.

DOUBLE BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY.

At the home of Mrs. James F. McIntyre, 315 Cedar street, a pretty garden party was held on Thursday afternoon, July 18, in honor of the birthdays of Mrs. J. A. Roper, mother of Mrs. McIntyre, and Mrs. A. C. McIntyre, mother of Mr. McIntyre, both of whose birthday anniversaries occur on the same date. Mrs. Roper was observing her seventy-ninth birthday and Mrs. McIntyre her seventy-first birthday.

A delightful afternoon was spent out of doors on the lawn visiting and serving. Dainty refreshments appropriate to the day were served by Mrs. McIntyre, also Mrs. Helen Campbell and Miss Annie McIntyre who presided as assistant hostesses of the afternoon. A number of handsome gifts and showers of beautiful flowers were charming remembrances of the day, which were given the honored guests.

Those who enjoyed the occasion were Mrs. George Eley, Mrs. Alex Mitchell, Mrs. Mary V. Colburn, Mrs. D. W. Hunt, Mrs. Henry Ward, Mrs. George Ward, Mrs. Robert Morris, Mrs. B. S. Quick, Mrs. E. D. Goode, Mrs. Fred McIntyre and Mrs. Sarah Tyler of Los Angeles, and Miss Jackson Harris.

AN INVITING SHOP.

Most alluring is the artistically planned show window, especially large and effectively arranged. The interior is very cool and inviting, a dainty study in buff and white. In connection with the shop proper are two well-lighted and well-equipped fitting rooms. The work room is large, light, well-ventilated and convenient, four valuable acquisitions in connection with producing a becoming and attractive "chapeau."

Already the shop contains an enticing line of early fall effects which give promise of new but pretty and modest styles for the coming seasons.

SMITH-GILHOUSEN.

A little home wedding beautiful in its simplicity was solemnized Thursday evening, July 18th, when Miss Elsie Gilhousen and Edgar Stuart Smith were united in marriage by the Rev. Jos. E. Callom of Los Angeles, an old-time friend of the groom. The ceremony was performed beneath a bower of ribbon grass and white Shasta daisies, above which a white dove hovered. Both Mr. and Mrs. Smith are graduates of our high school here and of the Los Angeles Normal school. They will reside in Los Angeles.

FIRST BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY.

Miss Ellena Grace Anderssen of 409 Cedar street presided over seventeen guests at tea on Sunday evening, July 21, who were assembled in honor of her first birthday anniversary. At the conclusion of a pleasant afternoon a prettily appointed pink tea was served in the garden. A large birthday cake decorated with the name of the happy hostess, and one burning candle was the feature of the occasion.

REGISTER.

Those who have not registered since the first of January, as well as those who have moved since registering, must re-register before August 3rd if they want to participate in the primary elections on September 3rd.

Mrs. C. L. V. Moore, 1488 West Second street, has been appointed registration deputy.

GLENDALE GROWS

Its People Have Acquired the Habit

BY ALBERT MARPLE

Not until we have taken a long, searching look backward, say five, six or seven years, can we begin to comprehend what rapid and lasting growth this section of the San Fernando Valley—now rightfully called "The Glendale Valley,"—has made since our first arrival here in search of a home and a place that we could call our own. Unless we take this backward glance we do not realize how unusual and extensive this growth has been, and many of us who have lived here for several years take this growth as a matter of course.

"Oh, yes," we say to inquirers, "Glendale is building up rapidly." But at the same time we do not fully realize how much our city has and is expanding. Seven years ago most of Glendale and nearly all of Tropico was in orange or lemon orchards, strawberry fields, where the finest berries in Southern California were grown, which rightfully earned the name of "Tropico Beauty," and vineyard. On the very spot where the Pacific Electric station now stands, corner of Broadway and Brand boulevard, and the surrounding business property, were growing berries and oranges. The houses were few and far between then, the principal business section of Glendale being at Third street and Glendale avenue. In the large frame building, corner Third and Glendale avenue, was a hall known as I.O.O.F. hall, in which the lodges and societies of the place held their meetings weekly—these meetings being the only events which kept the town from drifting away into slumberland. The meeting of the I.O.G.T. lodge, which has since been discontinued in this valley, was the principal society event of the week—especially among the young people. But that was long ago and we have learned many things since.

We have formed many habits since that time, the principal one of which has been the growing habit. This habit of growth had its inception when the Pacific Electric railroad company turned loose fifty or more mule teams and several hundred workmen with scoops and plows into this place with instructions to cut a street right through the heart of this beautiful section from the Los Angeles river bed to the Verdugo hills. For weeks the dust flew, and the drivers forced their unwilling mules through the strawberry fields and the orange groves. But after a while, slowly but surely, the street took form and by and by the grading was finished. Every resident of this section rejoiced as the work progressed. Soon the ties were laid and the rails hauled in and nailed into place, then came the cars—big green cars—spinning across the fields, taking us in fifteen or twenty minutes into the heart of Los Angeles. The unsatisfactory service—four or five trains each day—on the Salt Lake was then a thing of the past.

By this time the growth habit was thriving and soon it took possession of the old residents, who had been holding their land for years with the hope that some day the clouds would burst and rain gold and silver upon them. The large ranches were cut into acreage and building lots and placed on the market, and outsiders, seeing the exceptional opportunities to be found here, snapped them up—and, by the way, these lots have enhanced in value two or three hundred per cent since that time.

That growth habit has grown constantly year by year with tre result that at the present time it now has Glendale and vicinity firmly in its grasp—and there it will stay. Time and again this section has known unusual spurts in building activity, but there has never been more activity in that line than there is at the present time. This city's building inspector told the writer that on Monday of this week the receipts of that office were larger than during any one day since the incorporation of the city. As this growth habit has taken hold of the Glendale people the desire for better homes, a more artistic and higher class of residences has also quietly stolen into this section. There was never a greater call for "good homes" in this valley like there is at the present time.

"When we started to build houses here," stated Mr. Lawson, of the Chandler & Lawson real esatte and building firm, "we set out to construct homes ranging about $2500, and at that time the people would not stand a higher price than that. But for the past year or so we have found that the people want homes somewhere around the $4500 mark, and residences that stand near this figure have a far better chance for sale than do the cheaper houses."

And it must be remembered that these men know what they are talking about, for they build on the average of three new homes every month—from thirty to fifty houses every year, and these homes average at least $4000 each. This firm employs about twenty men all the year around and often carries as many as thirty workmen on their payroll. The following building activity and real estate sales were reported by Mr. Lawson this week:

A home erected by this firm was sold to Mrs. A. Lewis of Los Angeles. This home is located on Jackson street, contains seven rooms, is of the single story bungalow type, and brought $4800.

Another home erected by this firm on Lomita avenue was sold this week to A. J. Casebeer, who has been a resident of this city for some time. The home contains seven rooms, is of one story, is on a 50x150 foot lot, and was sold for a consideration of $4500.

This firm also reports the sale of a lot at the corner of First and Louise streets to C. J. Orff for $675 cash. This lot is 50x150 feet.

Two new homes are being erected at this time by this firm, one to be located on Kenwood street, the other on Lomita avenue. These homes will be of seven rooms each and will cost about $3000 each to erect.

During the past week the following building permits were granted:

A. Laurent, one-story, six-room house at 466 Rock Glenn avenue to cost about $2000.

J. W. Venable, at 128 North Kenwood street, a seven-room, story and a half home to cost about $2500. George Peters is contractor.

B. H. Waite, 133 North Louise street, story and a half house of seven rooms, to cost about $3000. R. J. Hamilton, contractor.

J. P. Shropshire, 409-11 Broadway, brick garage to cost about $4500. This building will have ornamental brick front and the ground floor will be 50x80 feet.

W. H. Eurick, 219 Maryland avenue, a five-room, single story house to cost about $2000. J. W. Walters, contractor.

H. W. Vanderhoff, 201 Jackson street, a single story seven-room house to cost about $2500.

C. J. Sullivan, 251 East Fifth street, single story, five-room residence to cost about $1500.

It is understood that sketches are being drawn for T. W. Wright, real estate agent with offices on Broadway near Brand boulevard, for a block to cost about $15,000. We have heard that the corner on which this block will be located, southeast corner of Broadway and Brand boulevard, was purchased recently by Mr. Wright for $10,000, this being the highest price paid for a single lot in Glendale. Rumor has it that when this block, which will be strictly modern, is erected, the corner store will be occupied by the First National Bank of this city.

Lot on Jackson north of First street, in the Livingston tract, to P. S. Venable of Redondo. Lot on Kenwood, between First and Doran streets, from C. O. Pulliam to Joseph W. Venable, who will at once start the erection of a beautiful home on the same.

Condemnation proceedings along Brand boulevard for the purpose of adding ten feet along each side of the street have been completed. It has been stated that the Pacific Electric company will shortly expend several thousand dollars in lowering their tracks along Brand boulevard to the level of the street.

Work was started this week on the improvement of Sixth street, this being the connecting strip of road between the splendid boulevard from Pasadena through Eagle Rock to the eastern limits of this city. The western end of this strip to be improved, connects with the already improved road on Sixth street at Glendale avenue. This Sixth street strip connects the already improved sections of the Pasadena-to-the-Sea boulevard. It will be built by Peter L. Ferry at a cost of about $20,000.

Directly in the path of this growth habit comes the calling this week by the trustees of the bond election to the extent of $210,000. There is little reason why the vote at this bond election should not be overwhelmingly in favor of the bonds, providing the people have a chance to say how, when and where their good money should be spent.

GLENDALE, CAL., JULY 26, 1912

The abolishing of the prizefight is a reform which the last legislature didn't have time to attend to.

"My County 'tis of Me," written by Theodore Roosevelt, will be the campaign song of the new National party. —Bishop Herald.

Throwing a tomahawk at a prime minister is the latest thing in popular pastime that has met with the approval of the English suffragette. It is selfish in Mr. Asquith to object.

Jay E. Randall of Artesia is a candidate for state senator in his district. His platform seems to be Anti-Committee of Fifteen and anti-city and county consolidation, both of which antis are pretty good to stand by, and we wish Jay success.

G. Roy Horton's card appears in this issue announcing his candidacy for superior judge. Mr. Horton is one of the best known and most popular men in the county and his chances for success are excellent.

Los Angeles is contemplating the construction of a municipal railroad in the bed of the Los Angeles river. This is a project that looks well in summer time, but there have been winters when the Los Angeles river alone could have occupied more than its own bed.

The Glendale city trustees will call an election for a bond issue of $310,000. Presumably they will present to the electors a statement showing how this large sum of money is to be spent and for what specific purposes. The voters are entitled to the fullest information on the subject and will no doubt receive it. The experience of the city in its initial enterprise of municipal ownership has been so successful that it is reasonable to infer that a further development along that line would not necessarily be a burden on the taxpayers.

Supt. Mulholland in a recent address showed the steady increase in the quantity of water in the Los Angeles river as compared with a period a dozen years ago. There would seem to be something wrong with the expert testimony given in the case of the city against the valley farmers who were finally enjoined from pumping, but continued to do so. The consumption of water by the city has doubled, the quantity of water pumped by the farmers has increased, and so has the quantity of water in the river. What becomes of the theory that the wells robbed the city of water?

UNBIASED TESTIMONY.

Gradually, but surely, the truth in regard to the action of the national Republican committee in the contest cases will be understood by the people who have formed wrong conclusions from partisan evidence. Current Literature is a publication which cannot fairly be accused of bias; the July number contains the following epitome on the subject:

"Although the hearings before the national committee were thrown open this year, for the first time, to the press associations, it is almost impossible to form a clear idea of the merits of the cases. Most of the contests were made by Roosevelt men. That many of these contests were trumped up was afterwards admitted by friends of Mr. Roosevelt. After the first seventy-two contests had been decided, Senator Borah, a staunch Roosevelt member of the committee, authorized the statement that only two of the seventy-two "had the slightest merit." For the others—all being contests brought by Roosevelt men—there was, said the senator, "no excuse whatever." The Washington Times (owned by Frank Munsey, another ardent friend of Mr. Roosevelt, admitted that in the case of "the larger number of southern contests started early in the game," it was "not expected that they would be taken very seriously." As the decisions continued, however, to be very largely in Mr. Taft's favor, the denunciations of the committee by Mr. Roosevelt and his adherents grew in violence and volume." In many of these cases," asid Mr. Roosevelt," the Taft delegates represent absolutely nothing but fraud as vulgar as brazen, and as cynically open, as any ever committed by the Tweed regime."

The contests in Indiana were cited by him as among the very worst. Yet these very cases were decided in Taft's favor by a practically unanimous vote (except in one district) at least fourteen members of the committee being Roosevelt adherents."

NO ROOM FOR THE PESSIMIST.

The pessimist in Southern California is out of place, he is a misfit and ought to go back to—well, say Chicago, although really there is nothing small about the Windy City. It is hard to be a pessimist in this climate where the occasional fervent warmth of a summer day is followed by the refreshing coolness of the night. Once, in years a good while gone, a young man came to Southern California from the Atlantic Coast. He had read Dana, Bayard Taylor and that romantic narration of rosy colored truths, Charles Nordhoff, and was filled with the spirit of California before his feet touched its soil. He came to "grow up with the country," and he grew! He found a city of about ten thousand people, and he found ten thousand people asleep! A half dozen old families owned the most valuable portion of the city and their rentals barely kept them out of the sheriff's hands. Then something happened. Down through the valley of the San Joaquin and over the pass of Tehachepi, pulling the steel rails after them and leveling mountain and hill, came the railroad builders, and one day a train of cars running unsteadily on newly placed tracks, came trundling into Los Angeles.

It was a peaceable but rude invasion and its coming was, in some quarters at least, resented. Collis P. Huntington was the moving spirit in the building of the road, and Collis was not popular, for he had threatened to "make the grass grow in the streets of Los Angeles." More than that, he had told the denizens of the sleepy "pueblo," a year or two before, that if they did not raise him a bonus of a good many thousand dollars, he would take his road over back of the mountains and through the desert from Mojave down to Colton and sidetrack the "City of the Queen of the Angels" as Nordhoff would say. Then Los Angeles woke up long enough to vote for the required bond issue and went to sleep again. And "Uncle" Collis kept on. He built the Southern Pacific railroad on out over the "Great American Desert" to Yuma and to its eastern connections beyond. Then the young man saw Los Angeles awake at last, shake off the drowsiness of the centuries and with the new blood of the East in its veins, proceed to do the things that make a people great. And he has watched her doing it ever since, but doing great things with an ever increasing vigor and with processes increasing in potentiality with each task accomplished. The ten thousand people of the somnolescent period increased to three hundred and fifty thousand and "cow counties" of the '70's became the scene of unprecedented empire building. And the railroads have done the most of it, for after the much abused Collis P. Huntington passed over the Great Divide, there came as his successor his nephew, Henry, the former was the genius of the steam railway, but the latter is a necromancer dealing in electricity. One took the age-old sunpower hidden in the carbon of the coal and converted it into steam, the other tapped the reservoirs of the lightning and harnessed the invisible to his trolley. The former made feasible the building up of Imperial Valley in the heart of the desert; the latter was content to gather together city and city and to ring around them the clustering fledglings of their kind. The young man and the pessimist? Oh, they got lost in the deal!

POLITICAL ETHICS.

Politicians are no doubt a bad lot, at least when they belong to the opposing party; but there are certain cardinal virtues possessed by successful politicians which the lay mind, the new and enthusiastic volunteer in political ranks, is frequently unable to comprehend, and consequently does not practice. There is a good deal of loose talk about the people being misrepresented by their representatives, but when analyzed closely this assertion can rarely be established as a fact. This idea has doubtless become current from the fact that representatives in legislatures and elsewhere have not done as a considerable portion of their constituency expected them to do in certain instances. But it should be borne in mind that a public representative very rarely receives specific instructions from the voters, he is merely instructed in a general way and when the time for action comes, a number of circumstances newly created arise to complicate the issue and may swerve him legitimately from the course that many expected him to follow. It is only rarely that a representative acts contrary to a specific pledge or to definite instructions. The members of the electoral college in all the history of politics in the United States have invariably been true to an obligation which is only implied. It is at first glance remarkable that there has not been a single political Judas of all those who have acted in this capacity. It frequently happens that a representative in the legislature is instructed or has pledged himself to support a certain candidate for United States senator and we cannot recall an instance where such pledge has been broken or such instructions disregarded, although possibly there have been a few rare cases. Coming down to mere politics and the much abused politicians, the same sense of honor has prevailed almost universally until the era of the "New Thought" in political affairs. And this new thought seems to consist in a disregard for precedent, for wholesome restraint over individual action, a breaking down of all the bars which have been erected for the conservation of the public welfare, which consists in the greatest good to the greatest number by the subordination of the individual preference. In practical politics the unwritten law of the caucus, for instance, is that the minority shall bow to the expressed wish of the majority and the resultant action shall be that of the unit. The conscientious member of the party who is not willing to submit to this rule refrains from participation in the deliberations of the body, but having entered into it, he is in honor bound to submit to the verdict. In conventions where the old system of nominating a party ticket was in vogue, the candidate who failed to receive the nomination he aspired to and afterwards went before another convention in an effort to secure the same thing, or who ran independently, was looked upon as having a blot upon his record and was branded more or less deeply with the stigma of the self-seeker. But the old order seems to be passing, the individual is becoming a law unto himself, the decision of the umpire is no longer binding, and the verdict of the court may or may not be accepted. There are features of this departure from the old way that seem to the observer to be rather demoralizing and productive of false reasoning and specious argument. In a recent number of a Los Angeles weekly supposed to represent reform in political affairs, there recently appeared an editorial in which the conclusion arrived at was that "A great man cannot afford to be consistent." A comfortable conclusion for the defendant of inconsistency to arrive at, but reached by a process of reasoning which it is to be hoped will not be taught very generally to the youth of the land. A logical result of this loose idea of political affairs is the action of certain leaders of party factions in California who after going into a convention, repudiated its action on an unfounded pretext and still persist in wearing the livery of the party which they voluntarily left. This action can only be defended by good citizens who are more or less ignorant of political ethics as described above. Their reasoning is along the lines of the militant suffragettes who believe that the end justifies the means and who therefore smash precedents, laws and windows at one and the same time.

SOMETHING Going to Happen IN GLENDALE

Just Think, an Upright Piano, Made by one of the Leading Manufacturers in the United States, to be Given Away by The Glendale News Absolutely Free of Charge.

We want every lady in Glendale and vicinity to try and win this Piano. NOW LISTEN. You don't have to work. All that it requires is for you to talk to your friends ten or fifteen minutes a day and tell them while our representatives are getting subscriptions, to place the votes to your credit. We don't expect you to get any subscribers for the simple reason we have employed extra help for this work. When our solicitors call upon some of your friends and if they mention your name you will be credited with the votes, according to how long a time they subscribe for. The scale of votes are 50 votes for one year's subscription, 400 votes for three years' subscription, 1000 votes for a five years' subscription. The price of our paper is $1.50 for one year, $3.50 for three years, and $5.00 for five years, so try and have your friends subscribe for a five years' subscription. By this they are saving $2.50, and you are receiving 1000 votes. This is one of the grandest opportunities you have ever had to win a beautiful Piano without any work on your part at all.

We expect that this contest will be closed in not later than three or four weeks. It is not a proposition that you have to wait six or eight months for, but it will positively close in four weeks time. Of course, we may be in a position to close it in three weeks if the women of Glendale and vicinity will induce their friends to subscribe immediately. We have our agents in the field now, and they are giving each and every subscriber a small ballot. We put your name on this ballot and the results will appear in our paper at every issue until the contest is closed. NOW BE SURE AND COME OVER TO OUR OFFICE IMMEDIATELY AND PUT YOUR NAME DOWN AS ONE OF THE CONTESTANTS. Remember it costs you nothing to register your name, which will appear in our paper every issue, showing just how you stand. We again advise you to come over and register your name immediately.

Suggestive Questions

On the Sunday School Lesson by Rev. Dr. Linscott For the International Press Bible Question Club.

Copyright, 1911, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.

July 28, 1912.

[Copyright, 1911, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D. D.]

Golden Text—Gather ye together first the tares and bind them in bundles to burn them, but gather the wheat into my barn. Matt. xiii:30.

(2.) Would you say, and why, that Jesus here meant that the church as a visible society on earth contains both good and bad people?

(3.) What is the difference in the results as between good seed and bad seed as suggested in this parable?

(4.) What in this parable stands for wheat and what for tares?

(5.) What resemblance is there between the wheat and the tares?

(6.) If Christ stands for the man who sowed "good seed," whom does the enemy stand for who sowed the tares?

(7.) What chance would Satan have to sow tares if people kept wide awake?

(8.) Verse 26—Can "tares," or sin, ever be regarded as another form of good? Give your reasons.

(9.) Is it possible, or not, and why, for sin to produce good results?

(10.) Verse 27—Who are those who generally complain to God because of sin in the church?

(11.) Verses 28-29—Should a Christian church or not, and why, expel all those members who are admittedly living sinful lives? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

(12.) There used to be frequent trials of members in evangelical churches for immorality. When did you last learn of such a trial and how is it that they are now so infrequent?

(13.) Verse 30—What will be the difference in that great day between the doom of a sinner in the church and a sinner in the world?

(14.) What will be the fate of the finally impenitent sinner?

(15.) What will be the final condition of all true Christians?

(19.) When and what will the harvest be?

(20.) Verses 40-43—Does Jesus mean that the literal tares are burned in the fire or that sinners will be? Give your reason.

Garrick's Wonderful Face.

Garrick had a poor opinion of the French actors of his day, and when in Paris for six months in 1763 to show what he could do without the aid of the usual accessories of the stage he gave private performances to audiences that quickly succumbed to the spell of his art. He told stories, gave scenes from Shakespeare and acted dramas in dumb show. There are familiar tales concerning his wonderful mobility of features and body, of his power to "create a new physiognomy which his friends did not recognize." There is the story, for instance, that Garrick posed to Hogarth for the portrait of Fielding after Fielding's death. And there is the other story that in sitting to Reynolds Garrick so completely changed his facial expression three times in succession that the artist flung down his brush and declared that he believed "he was painting from the devil." His French auditors were subjected to the same sensations.

His Hold on Fame.

Sir Henry Irving was playing his annual London engagement once when Nansen, then in the height of his fame as an arctic explorer, came back from an expedition in search of the north pole. The curtain was just about to rise one evening when Stoker came behind the scenes with news that Nansen was sitting in the royal box. Irving received the news in silence.

A few minutes later one of the members of the company bustled up to the star to tell him the same thing. Irving merely grunted. And right on the heels of this up came a fluttering woman super and said:

"Oh, Sir Henry, did you know the great Nansen was out front?"

"Nansen? Nansen?" said Irving as though he were trying to remember who this person Nansen might be. "Oh, yes—the chap who stands the cold so well!"—Saturday Evening Post.

A Cook's Accidental Discovery.

One of the best ways of cooking potatoes was accidentally discovered through the unpunctuality of a train. When the line from Paris to St. Germain was opened the first train carried an official party for whom lunch was ordered. The meal was fixed for noon, and shortly before that hour the potatoes were put on to fry. A few minutes afterward a message came that the train would probably be delayed for an hour, so the potatoes were taken off the fire, but left in the pan. Then came a second message, "Train just arriving," and the potatoes were hurriedly put back to fry again. When the party sat down to lunch the potatoes were brought on with the steak. Each chip was then found to be blown out like a small, crisp, golden balloon, to the delight of the guests. The cook without knowing it had invented pommes de terre souffles.

A Parable.

Two men stood watching a steam shovel at work. With a clatter and a roar the shovel bit into a steep bank, closed on a carload of earth and dumped it onto a waiting freight train.

"It drives me wild," said the first onlooker, "to see that monster taking the bread out of good men's mouths. Look at it! Why, it's filling up those flat cars faster than a hundred men with picks and shovels could do it."

But the other onlooker shook his head and answered:

"See here, mister; if it would be better to employ a hundred men with picks and shovels on this job wouldn't it be better still, by your way of thinking, to employ a thousand men with forks and tablespoons?"—New York Tribune.

Boat Racing in the Old Days.

Boat racing was a very different affair from what it is now, when the first boat race between Oxford and Cambridge came off at Henley in 1829. Oxford won, wearing "blue checks" and sporting black straw hats with a broad blue ribbon, while Cambridge was in white with pink waist bands and high hats. The weights of the racing boats used at this time may be judged from the fact that when they were converted from eights to six oars, with seats for passengers added, they could easily carry twenty persons.—London Chronicle.

Her Busy Life.

"Aunt Martha spends all day long hiding her silver in fifty different places to defeat the burglars she is perfectly sure are coming here."

"Goodness!"

"And she spends all night hunting for it and gathering it into one pile in case of fire."—Harper's Bazar.

Erudition.

Dorothy (looking up from her book)—What is an apse? Jacky (in a superior way)—I dunno exactly. Something in a cathedral, I think. Dorothy—Oh, is it? I thought it was that thing Cleopatra killed herself with.—Metropolitan Magazine.

The Old Story.

The Queen—Where is his majesty? The Maid—The king is in his counting room counting out his money. The Queen—Good heavens! I hope he won't miss that ten dollar bill I took out of his vest last night!—Chicago News.

Carelessness.

The Young Doctor—Just think, six of my patients recovered this week. The Old Doctor—It's your own fault, my boy. You spend too much time at the club.

The wages of sin are always paid. If there is any delay in settlement compound interest is added.—Youth's Companion.

The Right Kind of Hustler.

There is a good story concerning a certain trip of inspection when Louis Hill and a party of officials were taking a peek at the station agents somewhere along the line in Minnesota. At a station we may call Oscarville an agent, perhaps forewarned, was observed frantically moving trucks and cleaning up.

"There's a hustler for you," said one of the party.

"Humph," said Hill.

At another station the agent met them smilingly, smoking a good cigar and clad in his best clothes. He was frankly idling, yet nothing was askew.

"Well, what do you think of that?" commented one of Hill's friends. "There's an agent who has time to loaf."

"Humph," said Hill.

A month later the "loafer" was promoted.

"If a man can get the work done without doing it himself he's the man for me," was the explanation of the railroad president.—Metropolitan Magazine.

CHAPTER V.
The Wishing Stone.

THE girls who had been invited to spend the night at the Pines came early the next day, and I went to the fields with Bud, for Miss Ellen told me that I would only be in the way if I stayed at home. I saw Bud at his plow and watched how cheerfully he did the work of a day laborer. I lit my pipe and walked several of the furrows with him, and then, heartsick at seeing this fine specimen of young manhood trudging wearily to and fro in the thankless soil, I wandered off in the woods to dream of Miss Ellen and weave schemes for the rest of the family when she would have become my wife. When? The question brought with it a flood of doubt, for, after all, would she give up the work she had undertaken, or would her pride allow her to accept any assistance for her family? I felt there were depths to her nature which I had not been able to sound in the short time I had been there.

For fear of wounding her I had remained silent, but I was now resolved to speak to her before leaving, and had I received orders that night to return to Boston I would have told her of my boundless love and asked her to become my wife. Still wavering between my inclination to declare my love and fear of being too precipitate, I returned to the Pines. I did not see her until dinner time, however, then only during a hasty meal, after which we assisted her to clear the table and place a number of small ones on the side porch for the party. We laid the collation for the evening's entertainment and then went to dress.

It was with some misgivings that I donned my evening suit, but on coming downstairs I found the colonel arrayed in one of an anterior date and Bud transformed from the plow hand of the morning in the suit he had worn at the time of his graduation. A number of young girls had arrived before Miss Ellen came down, and the men were assembled at the foot of the stairs as if waiting for her.

My heart seemed to stop beating as I saw her lithe and graceful figure, clad in an old brocade of her mother, coming toward me. Her hair was built high on her head, which seemed to change her whole appearance and made me start as I remembered my dream picture. The brocade was faded, but its gloss and richness remained. Her shoulders were bare, and her tilted chin gave her the air of some quaint old medieval picture come to life.

"Am I not in keeping with the house?" she said, interpreting my gaze.

"You are like a queen," I said.

"Then you shall pay me court for this one night," she answered and held out her hand to me, which I took, and, with the manner of an old time southern gentleman, just as I had seen Colonel Turpin do, I bowed low and for a moment let my lips linger on the tips of her fingers.

"You have other courtiers," said one of several men who came forward to join us.

She held out her hand, and as she did so she looked at me for a second. She withdrew it gracefully and added, with a smile, "I was only admitting a new one," and then bade me follow her. She introduced me here and there and told me how many times I must dance with each. We went on the porch, and, standing there, I was again struck with the resemblance to the lady in my dream.

"You are like the first part of my picture," I said softly.

"Then let me play it for this evening," she said. "And if you can imagine me a colonial dame you shall be a courtier from King George's court."

"Good," I cried, "if you will admit that I have come across the seas a-wooing!"

"As you will, my lord," spreading out her gown and courtesying. "But I will not be responsible for the consequences. So see to it that you play well your part, else I will send you to your king again."

After that I addressed her only as "most gracious lady" or "fair Mistress Ellen." I wooed her in the strange and quaint language of a hundred years ago. Sometimes she seemed startled at my earnestness, and when thinking my speech too fervent she would bid me go hence and add another wallflower to my already large bouquet. I would straightway return and tell her of the court life and wove amid my imagery an odd mixture of my New England home. Once, taking her hand for a moment and looking into her eyes, I said:

"Ah, Ellen, I love you well, and I would take you to a court in truth where you would find a royal welcome, and you would be a queen to every one who knew you, and I would so guard you that neither poverty nor sorrow should ever come near you or to those you love."

"I have naught to do with courts, my lord," she said with a certain pathos, and I knew she was thinking of her duty at the Pines. "So go back to your king, and, whether he be ambition or gold, or both, forget the simple colonial dame who more often plays the part of dairymaid. And now," she said, looking into my eyes and laughing, "go and seek out every maid over twenty-nine, and when you have led them all through the graceful minuet come back to me."

And I would do as bid and dance some old time waltz with some lonely maid and then return to Miss Ellen's side only to be sent away again to some one who she noticed was not dancing. Finally the supper hour was announced, and I was made happy by Miss Ellen, who chose me as her partner for the march. Just as we were forming into line some one cried, "It is the hour for the wishing stone!" and then one and all, save myself, for I did not know what was meant by the wishing stone, joined in the clamor. Miss Ellen yielded at length, and, still holding my hand and bidding me give the other to the girl behind me, and so on down the line, we started out of the house through one of the deep, low cut windows. We circled the porch, crossed the gardens and passed down the terrace. The moonlight filtering through the trees glimmered brightly on the colored frocks as we sped down the cedar lane.

At length we emerged on an open knoll in the center of which was an old stone sundial covered with ivy. We formed a circle round it, and Miss Ellen, letting go my hand, stood on a step by its side and, calling one after another by name, bade each lay his or her hand on the bare surface of the stone where the ivy had been cut away and to make a wish. One looking on might have thought we were a band of secret plotters taking the oath of allegiance on a tomb. It was no jesting matter, I could see, for each one in that gay party approached the stone in silence and reverence. The only sound that broke the stillness was that of Miss Ellen's voice as she called each name in turn. At last my name was called, a little more gently than the others, I thought, and Miss Ellen, seeing me approach, held up her hand and motioned me to stop.

"And now, Mr. Palmer," I heard her saying, "as a stranger to the wishing stone it behooves you to approach it reverently. There is no reason to tell the others this, for they know the legend and its secret charms, but to you, who know it not and who come as a stranger to it, tempt not its anger by deriding it, even in your thoughts, or its indifference by wishing for what is impossible. It was at this stone that my great-great-grandfather wished for his bride, and in less than a fortnight they were wed. He enjoined his sons to seek this spot before wooing the women of their choice, and it is a strange fatality that all our family who have not done so have gone to their graves unloved old bachelors and the women who have derided it as old maids. Of later years it has become the custom for lovesick youths and maidens in the town and county to seek it out and test its charms, and many a happy home owes more than we may imagine to the legend which clings about this ivy colored dial. The moment has arrived when you can test its power too."

Already I had become a firm believer in the wishing stone. Laying my hand on it and looking into the lovely eyes of Ellen, I made my wish and added a prayer that it might find favor with the fates. After I had finished we joined hands again and made three circles around the stone. Then all began to laugh, and some one started up the rollicking chorus of—

'Tis love, 'tis love,
'Tis love that makes the world go round.

All joined in save Miss Ellen and me, for we strolled back somewhat slower than the others.

"What did you wish?" I asked, but she only shook her head and said she could not tell.

"I wished that you"— I got no further, for she gave a startled cry that checked me before I could finish the sentence.

"Don't—oh, don't!" she said. "You have already said too much. I ought to have told you not to tell your wish, for if you do the fates become perverse and mock you. If you even hint of what you have asked in secret something will happen to mar its complete fulfillment. I am sorry you spoke about it at all," and I thought her face grew a little paler.

I dared not speak again, and we walked on in silence and joined the others in the old oaken dining room. Mr. Lamb asked the blessing, and the girls sat down, while the men waited on them and brought them supper. After a merry hour we danced again, and the incident of the wishing stone was soon forgotten in the frolic of the old Virginia reel. Miss Ellen led this old fashioned dance with me, and many a pretty ankle was displayed that night as toes were pointed and courtesies made, and many a little love scene, too, went on that night, but I was too busy with my own affairs to watch what others did.

When the candles had burnt down to their sockets and Mr. Lamb said the band had struck, then began the good nights, which lasted for another half an hour. The wagons were brought round and the horses saddled, and soon the whole gay company started like a cavalcade. Long after they had left we could hear them singing through the pines.

Bud saddled his horse and rode out into the night to think of some young girl, I thought, but Miss Ellen said no; that sometimes when he became restless he would ride for hours and return always with a brighter heart and more cheerfully take up the burden of his life again. When I bade Miss Ellen good night on the landing I held the tips of her fingers for a moment.

"You are my queen tonight!" I cried earnestly.

She let me raise her fingers to my lips and looked down at me in a sad, sweet way. Then, laughing softly and somehow, I felt, a little bitterly, she said:

"Your queen of tonight will be your cook again tomorrow."

Before I could reach her side, for my impulse was to throw myself at her feet and pour out my love to her, she glided swiftly up the stairs.

Within the next week I received a copy of the paper with my letter in it, prominently placed on the first page, and a note in the same mail from the editor congratulating me on the excellence of it. He told me to send one or two more from Georgia and then to push on and write up the bayou counties in Louisiana. He liked the dialogues and suggested that I give more interviews with the farmers. I read my letter in print, and it again struck me that I had not made it clear to my conservative readers that it was to the sons of the antebellum, slaveholding families that the south had to look for its regeneration and renewed prosperity; that it was this element which was rebuilding the fortunes in that section and not the few men from the north who had gone there to invest money. If I dared to draw a picture of the Buds and the Ellens of the south how the people of the old commonwealth would read the future of this sunny land and appreciate the struggle of its younger generation to overcome the obstacles which they had inherited in consequence of war!

A fine sense of honor had kept me from making use of the life at the Pines as a basis for a letter, but I longed to handle the subject as I saw it and to make others see it through my eyes and appreciate its beauty. Shut in my room away from the influence of Miss Ellen, of Bud and even of the colonel, I argued that such a letter could do no harm and might induce to much good. I do not hide from myself even now that there was with me a certain satisfaction in pleasing those in the home office, nor did I conceal from myself then the additional prestige such a letter might give me with my critics. The editor had complimented me on the first letter. What would he not do when he received one written with a pen guided by love and every word of it poured from the heart? If Miss Ellen loved me, I argued, she would only rejoice with me over my success. And then, too, she might not see it. This last thought brought a blush to my cheek, and I started up, determined to show her my letter and tell her what I contemplated doing.

What evil genius led me to change my mind I do not know. It might have been the fates of the wishing stone whom I had angered by partially revealing the secret I had confided to them. But at the time I was pleased to think it was a confidence I had no right to give her until I had told her of my love. Then, too, if I, who was as jealous of the family honor as Bud or even the colonel himself, saw no impropriety in making use of their heroic struggle with misfortunes, surely there could be none, I thought. When I should have told her of my love, together we would talk over these hard times, and together we would read my description of them and laugh over it, or possibly cry, for it was always the pathos of the life at the Pines which I saw and not the humor. When a woman loves she always understands, I said to myself, but I did not know then how sensitive these old families had become of criticism nor how deeply they felt their changed conditions. I had only seen their fortitude and bravery, for they would have thought it beneath them to complain of their poverty to others.

Unless I wrote some such letter, which would afford me a reasonable excuse for remaining another fortnight at the Pines, I would have to leave in a day or two at the longest, for the suggestion of the managing editor was nothing less than a politely worded order.

Cajoling myself into this belief, I hesitated no longer. My mind once made up, I was seized with a fever to write such as I had not known since the first days of my career in journalism.

Taking out my writing pad and throwing myself across the bed, I wrote with an enthusiasm I had seldom experienced. If one has not felt this feverish desire to write he or she cannot appreciate the feelings which prompted me to hold up every detail as I saw it and to lend it color where color might be lacking. Loving Miss Ellen with a passion that absorbed me then, I described her as a holy priest might paint the Madonna whom he worshiped and with the accuracy with which the artist might put upon the canvas the features of his wife and children.

My blood ran more rapidly through my veins as I sketched Miss Ellen in bold relief and as faithfully described her honest father and manly brother. The names and the locality were concealed, but not more effectually than the artist might hide the name of the mother model who sat for the Madonna. One who had known the artist and his model would see in the wrap of the Madonna a shawl the wife had worn for a score of years in the humble neighborhood and in the infant Christ the idealized features of the model's child. When describing Miss Ellen and her family I felt inspired and uplifted and left nothing out which I thought would enhance the letter as a picture. When I had finished it I read it over carefully, altering not a line, even adding here and there a sentence which would lend one more bit of color to the whole.

With this letter I sent a note to the editor telling him that I would remain in the vicinity of Oglethorpe another fortnight unless he wrote me to the contrary. I said there was much more material about Oglethorpe which I thought could be used to advantage. So highly did I think of what I had written that I felt reasonably certain he would make no objections to my plans, and in another two weeks I hoped to have secured Miss Ellen's consent to become my wife.

She seemed to know by intuition what was in my heart and what I had a mind to do, for she avoided being alone with me, and whenever we would walk after that she would ask Bud to go with us. There was a gentle dignity about her during these last few days which kept me at a distance, and if I paid her a compliment she would show annoyance, and when our conversation would become personal in its nature she would remember that she had left something unattended to or would find some excuse to leave me with a half finished sentence on my lips.

I soon saw too plainly that she did not want me to speak to her of love, though she could not prevent my telling her of it with my eyes and by the silent way I would watch her when she would work. Squire Hawkins came again one evening, but she did not walk with him, and once when Bud got up to leave I saw her lay her hand ever so gently on his sleeve, which was sufficient to have kept him in his seat all night long had she wished it.

One morning she received a letter at the breakfast table, and after opening it and glancing at the signature she slipped it in her belt, and when breakfast was over she went quietly out of the room, and I did not see her again that day. For several days, in fact, she avoided me altogether, and I became wretched in the thought that I had been mistaken after all; that she cared nothing more for me than she did for any one else, even Squire Hawkins.

In fact, I was not so very sure about the squire. I heard that he was the richest planter in the county and had the proud distinction of owning the only plantation which was not encumbered with a mortgage. He was an old friend of the family, and Bud liked him, and Miss Ellen herself did not seem to have anything against him. I might be a pauper for all she knew, and so I told myself, but on thinking it over in my room at night I became convinced that Miss Ellen would never marry save where she loved, and that she did not love the squire I could have sworn.

A pleasant birthday surprise party occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Homer D. Brown, 717 West Ninth street, Wednesday the 17th, when the mother of Mr. Brown who recently came to Glendale from Des Moines, Iowa, was honored by a gathering of friends to assist her in celebrating her seventy-fourth birthday. Mrs. Brown has been greatly improved in health by her stay in California and declares she would not now exchange the privilege of life in California for anything that the East has to offer, not even to return to the place of her birth, Michigan.

Many beautiful flowers and other tokens of friendship were received by the lady honored and after refreshments and congratulations the guests departed.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

Our meeting last week was well attended and as one lady said, as warm as it is, I am more than repaid for I would not have missed hearing Rev. W. E. Edmunds. Our society is indeed very grateful to him for his talk, and we could have listened with interest much longer, for the one and a half hours passed quickly while he talked.

The Prohibition Society of Glendale will meet Thursday night at 8 p. m., at the Adventist church, Third and Isabelle streets. All are welcome to the meeting.

GOOD-BYE PARTY.

Little Miss Francis Havey gave what she termed a "good-bye party," to her little playmates on Friday last, at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Wm. Glover, 1526 Ivy street, with whom she has lived for the past three years. The little miss will return to her home in Los Angeles. The porch of Mrs. Glover's home was hung with Japanese lanterns, and the rooms were brilliantly lighted and decorated. The little folks played games, enjoyed selections from the phonograph and piano and then had the real genuine party. There were peanuts, watermelon, lemonade, cake and candy over which they had a merry time. After wishing Francis good-bye, and with a most cordial invitation to come back to Glendale, the children went home to dream of the pleasant evening.

VALLEY VIEW

Our section was quite well represented on the Valley Sunday School excursion to Long Beach, Tuesday.

H. McLouth and family returned home Monday from a week's outing at the beach. They live at 1226 Chestnut street.

F. S. Thomas and family expect to move over on Fourth street near Central, the first of the month. They have been living at 1601 West Sixth street for a year past.

A. J. Casebeer has bought the uncompleted bungalow at 1454 Lomita which Chandler & Lawson are building. It will have nine rooms with every modern convenience. They are to complete it for Mr. Casebeer.

C. M. Blake of 1560 Oak street whom we noted last week as suffering from a paralytic stroke, died Monday evening. He had been failing in health for several months, but his death comes as a great shock to the neighbors who had been so accustomed to his cheery words and kindly deeds.

Lyman W. Adams was eighty years old last Wednesday and his good friends of the West Glendale Methodist church and the neighbors in general gathered after prayer meeting and gave him a delightful surprise. They brought a number of presents, among them a beautiful large flag, which the old veteran highly appreciated. Another was a bunch of eighty carnations, one for each year of his long and useful life. Mr. Adams showed his guests the little wooden fork and spoon he whittled from a live oak chip when in Libby prison. Mr. Adams, despite his service in the war, has always been a strong, hardy man, and is yet a great worker.

AMONG OUR RANCHERS.

Apricot Season On—Crops Generally Paying Well.

There's something doing in the fruit camps just now. On the outskirts of the city and far up into the canyons the fruit growers and pickers and the residents in general are busy—the harvesting season is here and the daylight hours, from early morning until late in the night, are taken up by work. All else but the gathering of the crops is forgotten.

The apricots are having their inning. This fruit comes but once a year, but when it does come it comes with plenty. Several thousand boxes of this fruit will be shipped from this valley this year. It comes, principally, from the Sycamore canyon, the Verdugo canyon, North Glendale and up Burbank way. A majority of the fruit from the northeastern section of the valley was taken this year to Pasadena, where it was sold to the canneries. The northwestern section ranchers relied principally on Los Angeles for a market for their fruit. Nearly the entire product of the Ross apricot orchard was sold to the Los Angeles market at fancy prices as this fruit was of exceptionally fine grade. On a number of the ranches a considerable quantity of the cots were dried. It has been a long time since the apricot product in this valley paid the growers so well as it did this year. At this time, when the season is in full swing, the price of this fruit in local stores is about 3 cents per pound. We can remember when the growers could hardly give the crops of their trees away.

Prices on all agricultural products are keeping up well in this section this year. At local stores home grown fresh tomatoes are bringing 5 cents per pound, but the price will soon be reduced as the crop matures. Scattering melons are being brought in from the patches up Burbank way and are being retailed at from 20 cents each up. The first of the ripe peaches are coming in from nearby orchards. This fruit is generally above the average in condition and is bringing 20 cents for the five-pound box. Early egg plant has made its appearance and is marked at local stores at 6 cents per pound. The crop of oranges and lemons here this year will be fair, it being somewhat lighter than in previous seasons, this being caused principally by the cutting up of a number of the groves into acreage and building lots and sold for home sites. The price, it is expected, will be a little higher and will counteract the effect of the slight shortage. The fruit is coming in of good size and clean, necessitating little washing and grading.

The present picking of Valencias will be finished some time next week, when the packing of lemons, which let up a short season, will be started again. The next regular packing of Valencias will be started early in August. These Valencias are better in size than they have been for years.

From the Sparr packing house seventy-five cars of oranges and thirty cars of lemons have been shipped thus far this season. The Edmund-Peycke packing house at Glendale and Lomita, has sent out possibly eighty cars in all so far this year. At the present time this house is closed, but will open again for business within a few days. It is estimated that at least 300 cars of lemons and oranges will be shipped from this valley this year.

Taken altogether the present agricultural season in this valley is paying well, and the ranchers are happy.

MUNICIPAL WATER PLANS IN PASADENA PROGRESSING

City officials of Pasadena are hard at work on preliminary plans for the taking over the private water companies by the municipality as authorized at a recent bond election. A redistribution of the supply is being mapped out and a water commission is being organized. By taking the surplus of one section and distributing it where there has heretofore been a shortage it is thought all will be benefited. Such an arrangement was impossible under private ownership because the city's supply was controlled by several separate and distinct companies.—S. Pasadena Record.

CONFERENCE ON PHYSICAL EDUCATION.

Under the auspices of and in conjunction with the summer session at the University of California there will be held this week the first annual conference of the Physical Education Association of the Pacific Coast. The sessions will occupy two days, Friday and Saturday. The most notable feature of the session will be a demonstration meeting on Friday evening in the Greek theater; advanced folk dancing, gymnasium drill, dancing for men, and apparatus work for men. The conference opens on Friday morning with a meeting in Hearst hall when Dr. Clark W. Hetherington of the Joseph Fels Endowment will speak on the "Function of the Physical Educator." There will be public recreation on the playground in the afternoon and a dinner that evening at the Shattuck hotel. Dr. M. A. Bigelow, professor of biology in Teachers' College, Columbia University, and Dr. W. G. Anderson, director of the gymnasium, Yale University, will speak on Saturday morning. The business meeting will occur after luncheon at the Shattuck hotel, and in the afternoon there will be a demonstration of playground activities on the campus. Professors Rugh and Boone of the university faculty will speak on Saturday evening. The members of the physical education department in the summer session will participate actively in these conferences. The department is under the leadership of Dr. Beach of Los Angeles and the members number over twenty. Physical education is constituting a notable part of the summer session course. The meetings of this first annual conference will be open to the public.
